Scenario Planning vs. Conventional Approaches

Forecast Planning

Traditional approaches to planning yield conventional, incremental and often unsurprising answers...

One "Official" Future

Scenario Planning

...Scenario Planning challenges assumptions and provides organizations with more options to make better decisions across a range of possible futures.

Multiple Possible Futures

"We're all facing the same storm, but we're not all in the same boat. Some of us are in duct-taped rafts and others are in reinforced cruiser ships and there's really no comparing the vessels"

Tulaine Montgomery, New Profit

"We're now dealing with three crises at the same time: a health crisis, an economic crisis, and a social justice crisis."

Mario Morino, Morino Ventures LLC

"I have no idea what's going to happen, but I know what I'm going to fight for."

Antony Bugg-Levine, Nonprofit Finance Fund

Prudent Assumptions

We identified five "prudent assumptions"—baseline realities that we need to come to terms with and hold onto in order to move forward

The pandemic will intersect with and compound other ongoing trends

The need for nonprofit services will dwarf available capacity and resources

A significant number of nonprofits will be forced to consolidate or close their doors

Impact from the crisis will fall disproportionally on communities of color and other marginalized populations

Differences in outbreak rates and reopening strategies will cause varying levels of crises and need across geographies and time

Critical Uncertainties

Through our research we identified at least five critical uncertainties that we believe have the potential to tip the future of the social sector in one direction or another

Length and severity of the pandemic.

Length and severity of the economic downturn

Government's response and the strength of the public social safety net

Impact of technology on operating models

Level of social cooperation across communities

Critical Axes of Uncertainty

Use the annotate star feature to tell us about your expected future:

Higher

Impact

We chose the two critical uncertainties that we thought would create scenarios that paint four very different futures

What is the continued severity of the crisis?

Lower Impact

- The virus is brought under relative control by the development of treatments, testing and monitoring, and/or vaccines
- The economy steadily recovers, and the economic downturn, while bad, is more limited
- The virus is harder to control and the number of infections and deaths soar
- The economy is devastated as cities and states are repeatedly forced to shut down and shelter in place. Unemployment and other economic indicators persist and record levels

What is the level of social cooperation?

Fragmented Sporadic Factional Variable

- Breaches of institutional trust limit our ability to effectively work toward common goals
- Where coordination is found, it is entirely factional in nature
- Attempts for change and reform are gridlocked
- A unified sense of purpose to address the crisis ultimately prevails
- People and organizations seek out ways to collectively solve cross-sector problems
- The value of collective responsibility is prioritized, and many divisions are overcome

United Enduring Broad-based

Scenarios Summary

The scenarios explore what the future could look like depending on the severity of the crisis and whether we come together as a nation—or come apart

High Social Cooperation

1. Return to "normal"

The relief that comes from a faster-thanexpected return to normalcy undermines the opportunity to address deeper inequities and problems

4. Rising from the ashes

Out of the throes of devastation, the nation emerges with a growing recognition of the need to fundamentally change our existing systems

Higher

Impact

of Crisis

Lower Impact of Crisis

2. Social fabric unraveled

As social and political divides become deeper, the passing crisis worsens existing inequities and responses are viewed through polarized lenses

3. A nation on the brink

As things worsen at an alarming pace, nonprofits and funders will need to begin to consider how they will respond if most other civic infrastructure begins to fail American communities

Low Social Cooperation

Scenarios Application

The four activities below can help you build the scenario planning "muscle" when thinking about your strategy

Make the scenarios your own.

Tailor the uncertainties and scenarios to fit your organization and the people, places, and issues you care about.

Find your anchors.

Having clarity about your core beliefs, values, and principles can help ground the decisions your organization will need to make.

Test your current strategy against each scenario.

Explore how your organization might adapt by asking the tough questions about your mission, strategies, and operations.

Develop a plan for 12 to 18 months, in 6 month increments.

Planning in these conditions is not about having a full operational plan for each scenario, but about having sufficient flexibility and choices as conditions change.

What clarifying questions you do have?

Discussion Questions

We hope you have a generative discussion in breakout groups; please use these questions as a starting point

What "expected future" have your members been preparing for? Which scenario is the farthest from what you are expecting and preparing for? What assumptions about what you do and how you do it would need to change if the unexpected scenario came to pass?

What ideas or questions arose that you would like to share?

LAST WORD

Takeaways for the Social Sector

Below are a handful of the most critical takeaways that emerged from our interviews

Many organizations will be torn between investing in high-risk, systems change and a desire for a return to opportunities for high-reward

normalcy

fundamental change

"[H]ope is not optimism that everything will be fine regardless. Hope offers us clarity that, amid the uncertainty ahead, there will be conflicts worth joining and the possibility of winning some of them. And one of the things most dangerous to this hope is the lapse into believing that everything was fine before disaster struck, and that all we need to do is return to things as they were. Ordinary life before the pandemic was already a catastrophe of desperation and exclusion for too many human beings, an environmental and climate catastrophe, an obscenity of inequality. It is too soon to know what will emerge from this emergency, but not too soon to start looking for chances to help decide it. It is, I believe, what many of us are preparing to do"
